

Over the past years, crises that Lebanon has experienced manifested themselves in different ways according to each societal sector. Economic uncertainty has generated frustration and disillusionment among young males, with consequences for their psychological health and stability. The widespread crises have also taken a toll on men in Lebanon, with many losing their jobs and plunging into financial instability that has saturated much of the country over the last two years -- subjecting them to feelings of anxiety or depression when they could no longer provide for themselves. Eventually, the crises in Lebanon have had profound impacts on women and men--girls and boys--and underscored, specifically their need for targeted support and interventions, as they take steps towards recovering some semblance of normalcy.
