

While no industry is completely recession-proof, some sectors tend to fare better during economic downturns due to the nature of their products or services. However, it's essential to note that the degree of recession resistance can vary depending on factors such as the severity and duration of the economic downturn, government policies, and shifts in consumer behavior. Demand for education also tends to persist during economic downturns, as individuals seek to enhance their skills or retrain for new opportunities.