

A hurricane is a severe storm. In the northwest Pacific, for example, they are referred to as typhoons. In the majority of the rest of the world, they are referred to as cyclones.