

4. Those who experienced long or frequent periods of unemployment had poorer health by the age of 50 than those who'd been steadily employed. One reason unemployment can negatively affect one's health may be an inability to afford doctor's visits.