The health sector plays a role in promoting and protecting the health of citizens, which is essential for them.The black bag contains household waste or leaves – The content of the red channel is dangerous, chemical, expired or laboratory reagents The steel container contains sharp objects and is considered infectious, meaning it is classified in yellow Note: The yellow and green channels are eliminated by burning, but the red channel is not the best method Chapter 01: Presentation of the study area Private health sector The private health sector does not have a clinic but has three biomedical analysis laboratories, several general medicine and specialized medicine offices as well as pharmaceutical pharmacies and dental surgery offices.According to a study carried out at the CHU BENI MESSOUS Algiers (Soukehal, 2006), waste Hospital waste includes two main categories of waste: Waste assimilated to household waste (DAOM) ?79% Infectious risk linked to sanitary waste: by skin–mucosa (intrusion); by air (aerosolization); by direct contact (with waste, hand–mouth contact, tobacco, etc.).State health sector The public health establishment of the daira of Remchi includes: the EPSP which supervises 10 treatment rooms distributed throughout the daira Chapter 2: Materials and methods household waste and anatomical waste produced in the services studied.o Counterfeit products: o Cannot be incinerated because they contain chlorine, dangerous for human health due to the formation of dioxins.21%.Annexes

Summarized by © lakhasly.com