

Over the past decade, chronic heart failure (CHF) has become more prevalent world wide ¹. This is mainly due to ageing of the population and the longer survival of people who have suffered myocardial infarction and heart failure.