Results Fifteen randomized clinical trials with 594 participants were included in the study and 12 in quantitative synthesis. However, the qualitative analysis demonstrated significant improvement in balance performance after different exercise interventions and traditional training. Gait speed performance also significantly improved after exercise interventions compared to traditional training (MD: 0.10, 95% CI, 0.03–0.16, P