A film genre is a category or classification of movies with similar techniques.Genres are important because they help viewers find films that interest and entertain them.Each genre has specific techniques, including plot, themes, and content.