Emission or Reflection of IR Radiation: IR sensors can detect IR radiation emitted by objects (infrared thermometers) or IR radiation reflected off objects (proximity sensors).Infrared radiation is emitted by all objects with a temperature above absolute zero, and its intensity varies with temperature.When IR radiation falls on the detector, it generates an electrical signal proportional to the intensity of the received IR radiation.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com