

Over time, this would shift the characteristics of a group of organisms. This supports what modern biologists have found about evolution through other means, including the examination of the fossil record and biochemical analysis. This will increase over time.