

The narrator was traveling in a wood when he came across a fork in the road, He was full of regret at not being able to travel both roads, He stood for long time looking at one of the diverged trails, He gazed along the path as far as he could till the point where the path bent amongst the shrubs and bushes