It is now regarded as more useful in giving information about the general behaviour of a numerical method and the quality of the approximation it produces