A rectifier is an electronic circuit for converting ac voltage or current into a unidirectional de voltage or current.The voltage across the secondary forms the input voltage to the rectifier diode.A half wave rectifier converts ac voltage into a pulsating de voltage using only one half cycle of the applied ac voltage.The AC voltage to be rectified is applied to the primary of the transformer.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com