

The Moon rises in the east, moves across the sky and sets in the west, just like the Sun. Because the Moon orbits the Earth, the time that the Moon rises and the time it sets is a bit later every day.