

Yes, I enjoy meeting new people because it allows me to learn about different perspectives, cultures, and experiences. Every individual has something unique to offer, and meeting new people expands my understanding of the world and helps me grow both personally and professionally.