

In short, certain personalities and certain flavors of happiness seemed to go together--and, though these results don't imply causation, they might inform how you go about pursuing happiness.