It is a network that connects users with each other and with the source computer with geographical boundaries greater than those covered by the local network.