

This is the power output of the solar panel and is typically the most prominent specification.