

Factors that need to be considered to ensure the accuracy of measuring linear acceleration in the wheel experiment include minimizing friction in the wheel's bearings, accurately measuring the force or torque applied to the wheel, and accounting for any external disturbances or sources of error.