CHNA entails analysing both quantitative and qualitative data. In order to comply with government regulations, public health departments and nonprofit hospitals must regularly undertake Community Health Need Assessments (CHNAs). In order to provide information for a grant application or strategic plan aimed at reducing local rates of substance use and overdose, a community may also conduct a CHNA focused on a particular subject, such as opioid and substance use disorders

Summarized by © lakhasly.com