A job is an important future goal that requires early planning since childhood.Applying for a job that is liked and appropriate for one's abilities leads to creativity and contributes to building and thriving society, while applying for an unloved and unsuitable job due to external pressures such as family or friends leads to failure and threatens the progress of society.The text highlights the importance of linking an individual's inclinations, abilities, and career choice in order to achieve personal success and contribute positively to society.Choosing the right job is closely linked to personal skills and experiences.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com