

You're going to love the culture here in the southeastern part of the United States. This means "hello." You should nod to them in the same way. The food is really good—if you like fried food. And since you'll be here during football season, you're going to have fun on the weekend. You'll also hear people talk English in a very different way than you are learning it. One of the more useful expressions to know is "I hear that."
