

House, daughter of mother Disco, is the stereotypical feel-good dance floor music with a steady beat. This musical phenomenon quickly became common phrase: "Do you have the music they play down the 'House?" It is however questionable if this name would have stuck so well if it didn't symbolize a whole lot more: Unity – Love – Acceptance. As Chuck Roberts shouts over Rhythm Control's "My House" in a paramount vocal sample of electronic music history: "[...] once you enter my House, it then becomes our House and our House music.
