

Some characteristics of the radiation mechanisms 1– The mechanism of heat transfer by radiation is superimposed on that of heat transfer by convection. This mechanism thus is particularly important in systems operating at high temperatures, such as process furnaces or steam generators. Both mechanisms can be considered to be in parallel.