

In this family, Grandma, who is Mommy's mother, lives with Mommy and Daddy. Sadly, Mommy and Daddy treat Grandma poorly and speak to her disrespectfully. They expect Grandma to perform many household chores, including cooking, cleaning, and even moving furniture. The family's dynamics are marked by a reversal of the natural order, as the younger generation neglects their duty to care for and respect their elders. This disregard is driven by a societal belief that everyone, even within a family, must prioritize productivity and commercial value.
