

The syllabus is characterised as being 'structural', focusing on teaching a list of basic structures/sentence patterns and vocabulary. The word 'situational' in the method's name refers to the manner of presenting and practising the sentence patterns (i.e contextualising them)