

When one hears the term "reality" applied to a expect that the events occurred naturally or, at the leas this is not always the case. Many reality shows occur uke rented mansions occupied by film crews. These living environments do not reflect what most people understand to be "reality." Worse, there have been accusations that events not capturcd on film were later restaged by producers. Worse still, some involved in the production of "reality" television claim that the participants were urged to act out story lines premeditated by television show, one mi t, were not scripted, but producers. With such accusations floating around, it's no wonder many people take reality TV to be about as real as the sitcom
