

this somewhat reductionist, customer–supplier interpretation fails to see the student as a learner, who should trust the institution where he or she is studying, and who should be encouraged to see the learning experience as a personal transformation."