In theory, any kind of organism could take over the Earth just by reproducing.Mathematical models of populations can be used to accurately describe changes occurring in a population and, importantly, to predict future changes.For instance, imagine that we started with a single pair of male and female rabbits.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com