

Never assume that your device or network will not be the next target of an attack. Taking protective measures can prevent loss of sensitive or confidential data and protect systems from being damaged or compromised. A username and password are two pieces of information needed to log on to a computer or application.