

The Middle Ages start with the fall of the Roman Empire in the fifth century AD at the hands of the Germanic tribes, several various illiterate and pagan tribes who did not have respect for the Roman learning traditions. Then, these pagan tribes converted to Christianity and showed deference to the Roman Church.