

Is beauty important? It can take limitless forms, allowing us to define it by what makes most sense to us. We are lucky to live in a time where many examples of beauty are celebrated and honored, with more inclusive and diverse standards set. External beauty has become essential in many fields, influencing various aspects of our lives. Beauty allows us to appreciate simple joys, find solace in difficult times, and develop a more positive outlook on life. Finding beauty in our daily experiences is crucial as it boosts self-confidence and enriches our point of view. Although many people say that beauty isn't important, I believe the opposite is true in our current world.