

Any machine-powered building service. Cooling towers and mechanical penthouses occupy high-rise roofs, and entire floors are frequently allocated to the containment of blowers, compressors, water chillers, boilers, pumps, and generators. With their high heat gains, modern buildings have reduced central heating to a mere supplement. Heating and cooling have evolved substantially.