

Caitlin Clark warned of Stephanie White expectation for Indiana Fever in four simple words. Stephanie White boldly set out her championship aspirations for Caitlin Clark and her team-mates following her return to the Indiana Fever as head coach. Caitlin Clark being recruited by Steph Curry and Sabrina Ionescu for NBA All-Star clash Caitlin Clark apologizes to fan after incident at golf pro-am and makes classy gesture. White certainly hasn't been shy about her ambitions. "It's competing for championships," she established. She added: "The expectation was always to be competing for championships, and I think now we have an opportunity again to be doing that." While it's uncertain whether this goal is achievable next year or further in the future, White concedes that such advancements will take time. After a season where the Fever reached the playoffs, only to be swiftly ousted by White's Connecticut Sun in the first round, Christie Sides was fired, paving the way for her comeback. She had previously held roles both as head and assistant coach with the team. The common opinion was that Sides hadn't fully harnessed Clark's abilities.