

Despite the mCSM in silico analysis of p.V736A variant, it can be predicted that it may affect the protein structure stability, which may lead to its misfolding. This variant is more likely to be benign (allele frequency in the general population is high, at 0.57).