

Some of the languages that people speak in Africa include a clicking sound. It is believed that the click languages may be the earliest human languages.