

To achieve justice and integrity in the treatment of cheating cases in school, the following measures can be taken:

1. Sanctions must be consistent and applied in the same manner to all students involved in cheating, without discrimination or bias. Provide a safe environment: The school should be a safe and reliable environment where students feel confident to report instances of cheating without fear of retaliation or discrimination. The penalties resulting from fraud must be clarified, as well as the actions that will be taken if fraud is discovered.
2. There must be mechanisms to report fraud confidentially and confidentially. An independent and specialized team should be appointed to investigate fraud cases. When these measures are implemented, justice can be enhanced.

Clarity of policies: Policies regarding cheating should be clear and known to all students and parents.

Fair Investigation: Fraud cases must be investigated fairly and reliably.

Application of penalties: The penalties resulting from fraud must be specific and fair. The investigation process must include hearing from all parties involved and gathering available evidence.
