

Have you ever seen what happens to a flower or plant when it suffers from lack of water? Combined with the rise in global temperatures, the effects of drought are more obvious: rivers dry out, and the land becomes unfriendly, dry desert. Without water, green fields and crops die.