

Not all lucky accidents have changed the way we live in dramatic ways. One summer day in 1948, a Swiss inventor named George de Mestral went for a hike. He inspected one of the burrs from his pants under a microscope. He saw that it had countless tiny hooks. When he returned, he was covered in burrs—seed-sacs that cling to clothes.