

Intellectual, literary or scientific theft is a claim by a person, explicitly or implicitly, to write what others have written or to transfer from others, in whole or in part, without proper attribution or recognition; in other words, false attribution or the impression that you have written what others have written. It is a work of fraud and fraud