

1. Reserves should be distinguished from 'provisions' established for resolving known liabilities and adjusting the value of known assets. Banks also believe it is prudent to establish reserves in order to increase their capital position, allowing them to better meet unforeseen liabilities or losses.