

The construction sector in Jordan and Lebanon could be a powerful motor for employment, development, and shared prosperity in a region wracked by the impact of conflict in Syria. It highlights the unacceptable risks that companies are running, and sets out recommendations for rapid transformation through increased respect for human rights. Workers' right to organise, or seek remedy for abuse, is generally suppressed.