

A more realistic viewpoint would be: “Even though one bottle seems insignificant, consistently recycling and reducing waste helps, especially if many people do the same. Both individuals and organizations share responsibility for managing waste.”