

A shunt off valve in a pneumatic system serves the purpose of diverting excess air pressure away from the system to prevent over pressurization.