

Introduction: The great scientific and technological development in informatics, and its availability in the third millennium, led to an electronic revolution that has now been applied in all aspects of life, and dispensing with it and its many services has become an urgent and difficult matter. Characteristics of computer, internet and information crime The communications and information revolution has produced new means for humanity that make life better than before; However, it opened the door wide for the emergence of images of socially deviant behavior that could not have occurred in the past; It departs from the existing criminalization and punishment circle; Because the legislator did not imagine that it would happen in the first place. The project for programs, and many crimes related to e-commerce, damaging electronic devices, destroying records on computers, broadcasting sexual images or films through devices, slander or insults via e-mail, and laundering dirty money using electronic money.