

Augmented reality is a technology that relies on dropping virtual objects and information into the user's real environment to provide additional information or act as a mentor .