

men and women take birth in this world and then, having performed their roles through various stages, meet death.