

An extremely large, complex and mature joint venture between a major financial institution and a third-party service provider was going awry in many respects, including knowledge retention, service definitions and pricing.