

OS file system is used to store files used and generated by the system, for example, image files, configuration files, logging files and accounting files.