

Failing to prioritize system safety and security jeopardizes user data and privacy, violating both public and client interests. This negligence exposes sensitive client information to risks, and the resulting insecure system falls short of ethical software engineering standards and professional best practices.